Dear [REDACTED]:

I write regarding several emails I received in November from the UC Office of the President concerning certain UC admissions information I posted on my website, AskMsSun.com. I have enclosed the correspondence for your reference.

I was distressed by the tone of the emails, which questioned the veracity of some of the information posted on my website. As I stated in my responses to the November 2, 2015 email thread, I was simply passing along information that I received from parents and students. Additionally, as reflected in my responses to the November 6, 2015 email thread, I was expressing my opinion regarding how students should handle the December test date. It was never my intention to mislead my readers, as the UCOP emails seem to imply, since I am working towards the same goal as the UCOP -- helping students apply to the UCs.

While I realize that the intent of the UCOP emails may have been to help set the record straight, please realize that I always have the best interests of my readers in mind, and strive to provide them with effective guidance regarding the UC admissions process. In this regard, I believe we both want to make the UC admissions process as painless and transparent as possible.

Going forward, I hope that we can work amicably together to provide UC applicants with accurate, up to date information which will allow them to put their best foot forward in their applications -- a win-win for both the students and the UCs. If you have any comments or concerns, feel free to contact me directly at ([REDACTED]) [REDACTED] - [REDACTED] or [REDACTED]@askmssun.com.

Sincerely,

Wei-Li Sun
